WHEN A MAN IS MARRIED
BY ONE WHO IS Dangerous Old Photographs.

If your wife ever digs up a package of your old photographs, and proceeds to comment upon what, to you, has once seemed charms in the subjects, don't make the mistake of appearing indifferent. It doesn't pay, as I learned last Sunday.

I had been poking around in old trunks and came across some pictures I had forgotten all about. She brought them to me in the living-room, where I was with the Sunday morning papers, and opened with, "Robert, here's some things you might be interested in looking at."

I glanced up and recognized the package. "I don't care to take the time now, Myra," I said.

"You don't?" she raised her eyebrows. "Why, I am surprised, Robert. Don't you want to recall those good old days?"

"Pshaw, there wasn't anything exceptional about those days. I'm pretty busy now."

"Busy," she mused. "Who could be busy with this galaxy of beauties so near at hand. Now this one—let's see, you were with her on a boating party on the Gulf of Mexico, weren't you, Robert?"

"I don't know," I said, not even looking up.

"You were," Lou told me about it one time. You were with a party of young folks in a sailboat, and because of the wind being against, couldn't make the landing at the beach, and it took the boat all night to get back to the place from which it had started. Wasn't that?"

"I said I didn't know, Myra. What's more, I don't care."

"And here's another one that ought to bring back fond recollections," she laughed. "This one with the lovely eyes. You've seen her several times since the old days, haven't you, Robert?"

"No," I shouted. "Why do you persist in such nonsense, Myra? Can't you see I am busy with these morning papers?"

"Oh!" So it is nonsense, is it? returned Myra softly, but with sarcasm in her voice. "But it wasn't always nonsense, now, was it, Robert?"

"Of course it was," I blazed. "I don't want to hear any more about it." "Perhaps there is a reason," insisted my wife.

"I tell you there is no reason," I said. "Of course, Robert, you could be ex-

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Robert W. Coe, assistant pastor of the First Congregational Church, will preach tomorrow morning on "The Joy of Service," and at the evening service upon "The Gnat and the Camel." Last Sunday was observed as rally day by the church and Sunday school, and Mr. Coe's sermon was a stirring call to service for the coming year. The full winter schedule of services and work is now in force.

The music arranged by Dr. William Stansfield, organist and choir director of the First Congregational Church, for the services tomorrow include at the morning service the organ prelude, alleluia, "Hymn of Praise," by Mendelssohn; anthem, "Sing Alleluia," by Buck; offertory, "Lord of Our Life," by Field; oratorio, "The Messiah," by Handel; and at the evening service, organ prelude, "Evening Song," by Balgove; anthem, "O Thou Whose Power," by Fossati; offertory, "The Radiant Morn," by Woodward. A short organ recital will be given each Sunday evening at the close of the regular service.

At Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, the pastor, Rev. A. Vincent, will give tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock a lecture on the subject, "Luther, the Man that Saved Religion from Officialism." Dr. Vincent's lecture topics for the following Sunday evenings are: October 17, "Wesley, the Man that Saved Religion from Irreligion," October 24, "Holmes, the Man that Saved Religion from State Control," November 7, "Carey, the Man that Saved Religion from Provincialism."

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Congregational Church held its opening meeting for the season of Tuesday afternoon, the president, Mrs. J. T. Bodfish, presiding. The service was largely one in memory of several members who have died during the past year. It was decided to organize a mission band among the young people of the church, and Mrs. J. S. Beech was placed in charge of the work. At the close of the meeting a song was served.

The First Congregational Church of Washington, D. C., will observe the 110th anniversary of the church's organization. The history of the church will be read at the first morning service, Sunday, October 11, at 10:30 a. m. The church has a great many members, and one of the services will be a musical character. At this service Dr. Vincent will be pastor of the church for twenty-one years and who now is president of Howard University.

At the Washington Epworth League, the pastor, Rev. J. M. J. Milford, will preach the first sermon in a series on "Money and Religion" tomorrow morning at 10:30 a. m. The subject of the sermon will be "How Money Can Open Heaven's Windows." At night the subject of his sermon will be "The Day of Salvation." The choir of Shiloh has been reorganized and vested and placed in charge of Prof. C. H. Harris.
